

Adopt a Book Campaign

Expanding minds and inspiring learning through every new book.

I founded the Adopt a Book Campaign to support the Aadarsh Bharatiya Samaj Library in Jammu by making new, engaging books accessible to students and community members of all ages. Here's how it works: individuals or organizations can "adopt" a book by sponsoring its purchase for the library. Each adopted book is cataloged with the name of the contributor, so everyone who participates is recognized for their contribution. This creates a sense of ownership and pride, as sponsors can see their names alongside the books they've helped bring into the community.

Through this approach, the campaign not only expands the library's collection but also fosters a direct connection between contributors and readers. The new books spark curiosity, imagination, and critical thinking, allowing students and community members to explore diverse ideas and perspectives.

For me, Adopt a Book has been a journey of leadership, planning, and community engagement. I've learned how vision, collaboration, and meaningful participation can transform a simple idea into a living resource that benefits many. Every adopted book represents more than a story—it's a chance to educate, inspire, and connect people, cultivating a vibrant, learning-centered community.
